

HAPPENINGS IN VERMONT

probably more than have been made on the spot where the factory stood than any other same place in the world. The business was conducted in the name of L. C. Hutchins, its founder, by his son, F. E. Hutchins, who employed from 100 to 25 men, who were thrown out of work. Usually in the winter many more were employed in getting in the logs. Nine or ten tenement houses were burned, some of them double houses with two families, who lost more or less of their belongings. The loss is estimated from reliable sources at nearly $200,000, without any insurance of any kind. While the property stood in the name of Mary Hutchins, who resides in Pasadena, Cal., and is in poor health, the loss really falls on Fred Hutchins of this place, who is the only son and who has the sympathy of every one in town. He states definitely that he will not rebuild this place, and in the spring, if the logs will come, the business was a large industry for the south part of the town and its loss will mean much. The stock of logs in the pond and river which had not been worked up, about 1,500,000 feet, has been purchased by Nelson & Hall company, who will move them to their mill. The mill contained one of the largest stationary engines in this part of the State. It also contained an electric light plant of its own, which was also used to light that section of the town. The products of the company were sold all over the United States. The logs went in the mill and some out finished product. The mill contained one of the largest sawmills, improved blowers systems for kiln-drying staves, it having been put in in recent years at a large cost.
